

Lisa Robinson

Lisa and her family have lived in Boulder Creek since 1990. After spending many years working in engineering management positions at high-technology companies she concluded her high-tech career in 2000, at which time she was the Vice-president of Product Operations for startup Sonics, Inc, to explore a wide variety of new interests, broadly associated with Historic Preservation.

She holds a BSc(hons) in Physics with Astrophysics from Leicester University, certificates in Interior Restoration and Preservation, Interior Design and Computer Aided Drafting and Design and has completed Digital Media Certificate requirements (but needs to turn in the paperwork!). Her drawings have been exhibited in the West Valley College Art Gallery.

She currently works as the Collections Manager at the Los Altos History Museum and is the Volunteer Collections Manager at the San Lorenzo Valley Museum where she also maintains the museum website. For both institutions she provides digital image services in support of archive management, research, exhibit development, and for the media. Her interests include miniature model building, genealogy, local archaeology and all forms of digital media development. It is a rare day that goes by when she doesn't use Photoshop.
